Robert DeNiro is a retired cop who suffers a stroke. As a macho homophobe he begrudgingly finds help from unlikely quarters. Philip Seymour Hoffman plays a gay transvestite neighbour, saving for a sex-change operation - not an expected fit for our protagonist. But the disabled macho man needs doctor-ordered singing lessons and his neighbour has the ability. R language
The screening will be followed by a discussion about acquired brain injury and recovery

Mike Moore takes on the right to bear arms and several other U.S. institutions. "With his signature sense of angry humour, this activist filmmaker sets out to explore the roots of the ensuing bloodshed and misery. In doing so, he learns that the conventional answers of easy availability of guns, violent national history, violent entertainment and even poverty are inadequate to explain this violence when other cultures share those same factors without the equivalent carnage." David Cronenberg's latest film. "A mentally-disturbed man takes residence in a halfway house. His mind gradually slips back into the realm created by his illness, where he replays a key part of his childhood."

Here's a film with a lot to talk about. Many people thought it brilliant. Some of us didn't. How do you feel about it? We'll have an in-depth discussion after this screening. R
