Rachel is a small town spinster school teacher who dresses plainly and tries not to stand out. Her self-centered hypochondriac mother dominates her life. It seems she'll never escape until one Summer break an old school mate returns to town and her closed life opens to new possibilities.

Joanne Woodward is perfect in this thoughtful and nuanced role, deftly directed by first timer (and husband) Paul Newman.

This 1968 classic is an adaptation of a well known Canadian novel "A Jest Of God" by Margaret Laurence. We're privileged to have screen writer Stewart Stern with us by phone to illuminate that process. R

A deeply compelling true story, recreated by Vancouver filmmaker Geoff Browne, about the spiritual journey of a young Tibetan Monk, Gyalten Rinpoche, who has established a Buddhist centre in Vancouver. Just Watch Me
Trudeau and the '70s Generation
A film by Catherine Anouh

FOR JACKSON: a time capsule from his two grandmothers - (50min) one of them is the wonderful late MP Rosemary Brown. JUST WATCH ME is a love story that takes us into the heart of the Trudeau generation. It's not so much about Trudeau as about the young people who he inspired. Innovative, sharp style and beautifully interwoven crisp interviews with 8 sparkypeople who grew up during the era, including MM fave actor/doctor Evan Adams and a sweet love story of a couple who are now Victoria residents. Martin Scorsese's biopic about the early years of Howard Hughes, legendary film producer, playboy, and test pilot, is pure razzle-dazzle entertainment. Leonardo DiCaprio gives an Oscar-worthy performance and Cate Blanchett is perhaps even more marvelous as the iconic Katherine Hepburn. Lots of grit for the MM mill here, as Hugh's story includes a major battle with obsessive compulsive illness. Pg13.
