Chomavision is a feature documentary about an amazing Canadian artist, Bob Choma. His life has been a classic creative, chaotic story: an accomplished artist as a child, he became graphic artist and businessman, a cartoonist, futurist, story teller - general sparky guy.

A graduate of Victoria's psychiatric hospital, Bob has been challenged by classic bipolar mood swings, prison time for counterfeiting, suicide attempts, and alcohol problems through a colourful life, but in his later years he was well and rediscovered his creative muse as an outsider artist.

His friend and fellow bipolar traveller, Bruce Saunders, was determined to tell his story. It has taken only 25 years.

Hopefully, beyond revealing one man's life journey, this film provides insights into the connection between the Bipolar condition and creativity, and how vital that connection is for some of us. 80min 2018 (unrated but nothing you can't handle)
