

Sold out in less than an hour - Transcription

So the book is published, it's 1988, and I'm going to England to make a speech at the university of Sussex. And it's an international crazy persons conference called Common Concerns. So I took a box of Shrink Resistant with me and I think I sold them for five pounds each, and I sold them out in less than half an hour. I found out many years later that that particular conference was some kind of seminal moment for the British survivor movement, and that they picked up a lot of tips and inspiration from the people from North America. That was kind of nice to hear that.
